United States counterterrorism efforts are based on specific conceptions of the nature of terrorist threat.

The National Consortium for the Study of Terrorism And Responses to Terrorism (START) is sponsoring this event to explore the different frameworks used to shape counterterrorism strategies.

Panelists will discuss the implications of framing counterterrorism efforts alternatively as:
- a global war
- an epidemic to be contained
- a law-enforcement operation, or
- an effort to improve inter-group relations

When: Tuesday, November 28th;
9am-11am
529 14th St. NW,
Murrow Room-13th Floor,
Washington DC

Panelists:
- Martha Crenshaw, Wesleyan University
- Clark McCauley, University of Pennsylvania
- Jerrold Post, The George Washington University
- Jeff Victoroff, University of Southern California
- Moderator: Arie Kruglanski, University of Maryland

This event is sponsored by START, a U.S. Department of Homeland Security Center of Excellence, based at the University of Maryland. Any opinions, findings, conclusions or recommendations presented at this event are those of the panelists and do not necessarily reflect views of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security.

RSVP: 301.405.6600
infostart@start.umd.edu